Commonsense knowledge about Semantic Presuppositions

In this specific section we focus on "Semantic Presuppositions".

Semantic presuppositions are facts or events that are implied by the factual knowledge.

In the following sections you will be given an image (always the same) and a textual description (always the same).

Based on the image and textual description you will be asked to rate from "1 - Not at all plausible/adequate" to "5 - Perfectly plausible/adequate" an RDF triple expressed in Turtle syntax.

To facilitate the task, you will be provided a verbalization in natural language of the triple.

Commonsense knowledge about Moral value-driven coercion

In this specific section we focus on "moral value-driven coercion".

A moral value-driven coercion happens when a typical ("literal") sense, as e.g. movie invitation, is overdriven with a specific sense that is part of the extended semantics of the word, in this case, charged with moral value-driven semantics.

In the following sections you will be given an image (always the same) and a textual description (always the same).

Based on the image and textual description you will be asked to rate from "1 - Not at all plausible/adequate" to "5 - Perfectly plausible/adequate" an RDF triple expressed in Turtle syntax.

To facilitate the task, you will be provided a verbalization in natural language of the triple.

Commonsense knowledge about Causal relations

In this specific section we focus on "causal relations".

A causal relation happens when two events mentioned in a text have a causal dependence sequence.

In the following sections you will be given an image (always the same) and a textual description (always the same).

Based on the image and textual description you will be asked to rate from "1 - Not at all plausible/adequate" to "5 - Perfectly plausible/adequate" an RDF triple expressed in Turtle syntax.

To facilitate the task, you will be provided a verbalization in natural language of the triple.
